Dear President Biden, Leader Schumer, and Chair Durbin:

We deeply appreciate your commitment to bringing diversity and balance to our federal judiciary, but as the number of announced judicial vacancies has risen to 119, we urge you to redouble your efforts in the final seven months of this Congress. At the current pace, dozens of these vacancies will remain unfilled at the end of the year, and we urge you to do whatever it takes to fill them all.

It is clear that the Biden administration and Senate majority understand how critical each judicial vacancy is to the protection of our constitutional rights and to the ability of the elected branches to address the most pressing issues of our time. Just this term, for instance, the Supreme Court is likely to overturn Roe v. Wade, abandoning fifty years of precedent and, for the first time ever, taking a fundamental right away from the American people. The Court is also likely to severely curtail the federal government's authority to fight climate change and make it exceedingly more difficult for states, localities, and the federal government to address this country's gun violence epidemic.

It is the importance of the courts to these and other critical issues that has driven this administration and this Senate to an impressive record of nominating and confirming inspiring judges with the urgency they deserve. President Biden's judicial nominees are highly qualified and incredibly diverse - 66% are people of color, 75% are women, and more than 60% bring with them underrepresented professional experiences that are sorely needed on the bench.

Yet we are painfully aware that, should the Republican Party take control of the Senate in this year's midterm elections, progress on balancing the federal courts will come to a grinding halt. Senate Minority Leader McConnell has repeatedly made plain his plans to obstruct should he have the opportunity to become majority leader in January – just as he obstructed President Obama's judicial nominees, leading to the fewest judicial confirmations since 1952.

Given this devastating possibility, it is absolutely essential that you redouble your efforts to quickly fill every judicial vacancy with outstanding and diverse judges. Reshaping our federal courts will surely be one of this administration's and this Senate's most lasting legacies, and the courts will have a significant impact on every important issue for decades to come. Thank you for your commitment to our judiciary and for your attention to this urgent call to action.

Sincerely,
